

CUPE Alberta will develop a campaign to highlight the impact that the Opioid Crisis has had on Library Workers.

Because:

- Library workers, education workers and frontline health workers regularly interact with individuals and families impacted by drug use.
- Alberta has experienced an increasing number of opioid deaths and front line workers require support in coping with the impact this has on their well being
- Employers do not always provide financial or emotional support for those staff impacted by drug related incidents in the workplace.